

General Palmer Again on the Stand.

More About Corriggan, the President's Protege—Did Murphy Tell the Truth?—Palmer Protests Against the Partisan Character of the Investigation—Bliss and Howe Brought to Book—The Steamship Agents Heard.

The Custom House Committee again met yesterday morning at ten o'clock at the Astor House. The attendance of the outside public was larger than usual and the committee received several offers of letters to give evidence of Custom House corruption from gentlemen who have suffered from it.

After making a few orders for subpoenas the examination of General Palmer was resumed as follows:—Shortly after I was appointed Assistant Appraiser I met Mr. Thompson, and he stated to me that I had one of the best offices in the city; I replied that the salary was not very large; he said that was a small matter, but the amount that could be obtained by making his allowances for damage could be made very large; he proposed that I should allow him to go around to the merchants and make arrangements and we could share the profits; I declined the offer; some time after that Thompson was appointed Weighmaster.

Q. Did you ever report this to the Secretary of the Treasury? A. When he was proposed for the appointment of Weighmaster I thought it my duty to do so, and I communicated a gentleman who was going to Washington to inform the Secretary of the fact; this was done and the Secretary held back his confirmation for some time, but he was subsequently confirmed.

Q. Did you hear who succeeded in getting him confirmed? A. I heard that Mr. Conkling went to the President and told him that Mr. Murphy had nominated him, and that he should be the judge in such matters and was responsible for the trustworthiness of his officers; Thompson was, I think, Harbinger Master when he made this corrupt proposition to me.

Q. Who was it that recommended him to Mr. Murphy for appointment? A. General report has it that Mr. George Thompson, the politician, recommended him. Q. What are the objections against the continuance of the general order system as carried on under Mr. Murphy? A. One of two stores in the hands of one man, the other a monopoly, where the business is a monopoly and enables Lee and Stocking to charge higher rates than if there was a healthy competition; the other a monopoly, where the business is a monopoly and enables Lee and Stocking to charge higher rates than if there was a healthy competition.

Q. Who was it that told you Mr. Conkling presented the President's signature to the bill? A. I would rather not say, but the information comes from a very good source; it would be easy for the committee to ask Mr. Conkling and the President whether it is true. Q. What was the date of Thompson's corrupt proposition? A. Somewhere about August, 1869; I believe the President's signature was on the bill, but I cannot say for certain.

Q. When did Mr. Murphy tell you the President's signature was on the bill? A. Somewhere about August, 1869; I believe the President's signature was on the bill, but I cannot say for certain. Q. Where did Corriggan live? A. In the Eleventh district; there seemed to be quite a desire to get Corriggan out of the office, and the committee decided to get him out of the office, and the committee decided to get him out of the office.
